

Illegal Hunting Brings $10 Fines

A sequel has occurred to the fatal shooting of Leo Benmalis, alias Pirette, of Princeton, B.C., while on a hunting trip near Olds on September 27th, when Benmalis was accidentally killed from the discharge of a .22 rifle in the hands of one of his companions, the bullet going through the 27-year-old farmhand's brain.

His companions were both shooting ducks with a rifle, instead of a shotgun, which is contrary to the game regulations.

Appearing before Magistrate F. J. Briegel the two men, Gordon Wagner, farmer, of Big Prairie, and Warren Smith, farmer, of Olds, pleaded guilty to contravening the Game Act. Both were fined $10.00 and costs, or in default of payment, 30 days in jail.

Their rifles were ordered confiscated by the court.

Red Cross Notes.

A Red Cross Depot has been established at the home of Mr. W. A. Austin. Supplies will be distributed from there and all finished goods must be delivered to the depot.

Supplies of wool for knitting of mitts, gloves, sweaters and socks, are being distributed to the work groups. Convenors who have not obtained their supplies should call at the depot.

Any individual not connected with a work group and who wishes to do work, may receive supplies on application to the depot. Instructions for knitting, etc. may also be obtained. Please note that it is not necessary to become a member of the Red Cross in order to do work for the Society.

Up to the present, abdominal binders and arm slings are the only hospital goods that have been requisitioned. Supplies for the making of these goods will be on hand shortly.

The finance committee of the Red Cross met on Tuesday night to arrange teams for the drive which will commence Monday, November 13th. You will be called on at that time and you will be expected to contribute to the fullest extent of your ability. Remember—it is up to you to help in providing comforts and hospital needs for the soldiers.

Opens Agency of Treasury Branch

The Didsbury Agency of the Treasury Branch was opened Monday by R. S. Robson, manager of the Olds Treasury Branch, which serves the Olds, Didsbury and Bowden districts.

The Didsbury agency is located at Scott's Harness and Men's Wear Shop and will be open Mondays and Thursdays of each week, instead of Mondays and Tuesdays as advertised last week.

Mr. Robson, who is manager of the Olds branch, is known in this district, having been accountant at the Royal Bank here in 1929 and 1930. For a few weeks at least he expects to personally have charge of the business here.

Grand Matron Pays Official Visit.

On Friday evening last the local Chapter of the Eastern Star held a special meeting when Mrs. Washburn of Wainwright, Worthy Grand Matron of the Alberta Grand Chapter, paid her official visit to the Chapter. She was accompanied by the Associate Grand Matron, Mrs. J. A. McGhee. A number of visitors from Innisfail, Olds and Carstairs were present.

The previous evening a number of members of the local chapter visited at Carstairs when the Grand Worthy Matron paid her official visit to that chapter.

Appointed Organizer For the Red Cross

Mr. W. A. Austin has accepted the position as organizer for Southern Alberta for the Red Cross Society.

His district takes the whole of Alberta south of Red Deer to the U.S. boundary and he expects to visit every point where a local Red Cross Branch has not been established and will also contact many of the established branches.

Mr. Austin is particularly fitted for this appointment, having been interested for years in the Red Cross and he has a thorough knowledge of the work in all its phases.

Mr. H. E. Pearson is accompanying him this week, and C. E. Reiber has volunteered his services for a week during the campaign.

Who Should Shovel Snow?

Should the town clear the snow off the sidewalks or should the property owners clear the snow from the front of their premises? is the question that is being asked right now.

During the heavy snow last week nothing was done in a good many cases and pedestrians have been compelled to wallow in the snow and slush or walk in the road for the past ten days.

A definite policy in regard to this question should be established by the council in regard to this question and the authorities should see that sidewalks are cleared of snow one way or other.

Fire at Threshing Outfit Causes Much Damage

While threshing on the O. E. Goddard farm northwest of Olds the straw stack caught fire, evidently from something that went through the blower, as the fire started at the top of the stack.

The blaze spread quickly to a bin nearby containing about 800 bushels of wheat. The bin was completely destroyed, but most of the grain can be salvaged, although the loss will be considerable.

Mr. Goddard suffered considerable loss from a similar fire while threshing in 1932.

Curlers Organize for Coming Season

The cold weather is making the wielders of the "stones and broom" anxious to get going, and they held their annual meeting at the C.P.R. depot on Monday evening.

The outlook points towards a successful season, as most of the old "stand-by's" and several new members have indicated their intention of signing up.

It was arranged to hold a drawing for two pairs of rocks, the first to be held early in the season and the other at the annual bonspiel.

The following officers were elected:

Patron: A. G. Studer
President: J. W. Wordie
1st Vice-president: Tom Morris
2nd Vice-president: Jack Topley
Sec.-Treas.: J. W. Halton
Schedule committee: J. S. McCloy and A. C. Fisher.
Membership committee: T. Johnson.

Price-drawing committee: W. McFarquhar, George Law and Norman McLeod.

The executive were authorized to make arrangements to rent the rink, make the necessary repairs and engage an icemaker.

The work of preparing the rink will commence as soon as the weather becomes favorable.

Renovate Opera House

Men are busy at work cleaning and renovating the Opera House, and when completed the theatre will be well up to the standard of any smalltown picture house in the province.

The ceiling and walls are being lined with "Donacora" board, a material which will not only enhance the appearance of the hall, but will considerably improve the acoustical effect. The ventilation of the building will also be improved.

The work will take two or three weeks to complete, but arrangements are being made whereby there will be no interference with the shows, which will be held as usual on Friday evenings and Saturdays.

Municipal Tax Sale Again Postponed

The Tax Sale of Mountain View Municipal District has again been adjourned for another two weeks and will not be held until Thursday, November 16th.

The recent heavy snow again delayed threshing operations and the Council is desirous of giving the taxpayers who are in arrears every opportunity to have their lands withdrawn from the list before the sale is held.

Amateur Contest Nov. 10th

Entries are already coming in for the Amateur contest which will be held under the auspices of the Canadian Legion on Friday evening, November 10th.

There are classes for instrumental and vocal numbers for all ages, which together with the variety numbers will round-out a good evening's entertainment. A special prize is being offered for the best patriotic number. A dance will follow the contest.

Farm Fire Losses

Official statistics show that in the ten year period, 1929-'38, farm fire losses in Canada, exclusive of dwellings, amounted to over $36,000,000 in 41,705 fires, an average loss of $863 for each of these farm conflagrations.

Now, over three and half millions of dollars going up in smoke every year is a substantial loss to the nation and a loss of $863 represents quite a serious item to the individual. There are very few farmers in the Dominion who could regard the loss of over $800 in the space of a few hours, and probably as the result of carelessness, as a matter of little consequence.

For this reason, it is highly important that some reflection be given to the principal causes of these fire losses on the farm in the hope that the knowledge thus gleaned will result in material curtailment of these hazards in the future. Fortunately, this problem has been tackled by the office of the Dominion fire commissioner at Ottawa, and much valuable information has been gained as a result of the study made by officials of that department.

The information, however, is of little practical value unless it is digested and borne in mind, with the remedy kept in the forefront as a guide for future conduct.

Eight Major Causes

Of the known causes of loss of farm property in Canada by fire, it is authoritatively stated that eight of them are responsible for 85 per cent. of the total. Since precautions can be taken to eliminate these losses entirely or reduce them to an infinitesimal minimum, there seems to be no reason why the fire loss on the farm should not be curtailed very substantially.

There are very special and even more urgent reasons why every precaution should be taken to prevent an outbreak of fire on the farm. One of these is the absence of adequate and mechanized fire fighting apparatus which is available in greater or less degree in every town and even in some of the smallest of villages. Another reason is the lack of a copious supply of water under pressure to fight fire. A third is a lack of man power quickly available to detect and cope with outbreaks and a fourth is the much greater risk of loss of life by fire in the country in the winter months than in the towns and villages because of the comparatively greater distances which separate neighbors.

Importance Of Prevention

All of these factors indicate the importance of practising preventive measures against fire on the farm and especially those which are related to the eight major causes previously cited and which are briefly discussed in the following paragraphs:

1. Defective chimneys and flues—Chimneys should be cleaned out regularly and not allowed to burn themselves out, as sparks often escape through cracks in the chimney and set fire in the attic, or they may drop on dry, combustible roofing, setting fire to it. The safest type of chimney is a good brick chimney, built from the ground up and lined with fire clay or vitrified clay of a thickness of at least $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch.
2. Sparks on combustible roofs—This hazard can obviously be eliminated by means of incombustible roofing material instead of a material that will ignite readily when exposed to sparks or flying brands from other fires.
3. Lightning—The tremendous toll of life and property damage annually caused by lightning can be materially reduced by means of well installed lightning rods which have proven to be nearly 100 per cent. efficient.
4. Spontaneous ignition—On farms this occurs most frequently in undereared or damp hay, although it also takes place in numerous other substances. To guard against this hazard, the following precautions should be observed: (a) Cure all hay well; (b) Do not pack the hay; (c) Do not place straw, fodder, bundles of grain or grass hay either at the bottom or top of mows of alfalfa, clover or soybean hays; (d) Guard against wetting of hay in storage from a leaky roof or open doors and windows; (e) Ventilate hay as much as possible after it has been stored; (f) Avoid, if possible, wide, deep mows.
5. Matches—Make sure that your matches are completely out before discarding them. A good practice is to break them in two after the flame has been extinguished. Always strike matches away from you. Keep matches away from children and do not permit smoking in barns or near combustible material. During threshing operations insist on everybody clearing their pockets of matches and place them in a safe container.

The Gasoline Peril

6. Gasoline or kerosene—Gasoline or kerosene should never be used to start or revive a fire. Avoid the use of gasoline, benzene or other inflammable liquids for cleaning floors or clothes. There are safe and cheap solvents on the market for these purposes. Never fill lamps, lanterns, kerosene of gasoline stoves, while they are burning. If necessary to keep small quantities of gasoline, it should be kept in an approved safety can painted red and plainly marked "gasoline". Small quantities of kerosene should be kept in closed cans of a size and shape different from that holding gasoline in order to lessen the chance of mistaking the one for the other.

7. Heating equipment—Heating equipment should be properly installed, operated and maintained. Wooden floors under stoves should be well protected. The sides and back of stoves and ranges should be at least three feet from woodwork or wood-lath and plaster partitions. Avoid long runs of smoke pipes. The sections should be securely joined and the pipes supported at frequent intervals. Smoke pipes should be at least 18 inches from unprotected woodwork. They should not pass through floors or closets or enter a chimney in an attic, and they should be cleaned at least twice a year.

Visiting The C.N.E.—61 Years Old

The Largest Annual Fair In The Dominion
(By Pratt Kuhn)

The Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto is not the only annual fair in this Dominion, but it is certainly the largest—the most complete and the most visited by people from all over the world, and especially our American cousins.

A striking fact this year was that—despite the two great fairs at New York and San Francisco, the C.N.E. was hundreds of thousands admissions ahead of the two, combined, a record to be proud of, because many feared a slump and that our people would flock over the border.

The C.N.E. is a great thing for Canada—a reflection of everything new and good in the field of science and industry superimposed on the real backbone of the fair which is agriculture and animal husbandry.

Of course, the real moments are really necessary—hence the midway (called Froxland at the C.N.E.) and the hot dog and hamburger industry—but, back of the froth were such things this year as:

Facsimile Printing—in which a small daily paper illustrations and all, is sent through the air and received in print through a machine the size of a radio.

Television Reception—where a person in one room is seen and heard in the next or fifty miles away by a special radio attachment. As yet 50 miles is the limit because television rays do not "bend" with the earth as do radio.

Cold Light—where a lamp at one end of a special rod is conducted through any kind of bend and delivered at the other end. Wonderful for dentists, surgeons, etc.

These are only a few of the marvels seen in 1939 and each year the way they are presented—the surroundings—the showmanship—improves at the C.N.E. and all are seen for the 25c—the fourth of a dollar or five tickets for $1.00.

And, friends, there are no war alarms to disturb you!

Thank heaven for the C.N.E. and friendly neighbors to enjoy its attractions with us!

We hope you can get a trip East next fall—if you do—"meet us at the Fountain in the C.N.E."

Three Serving Together As They Did In Last War

In 1914 three officers went to France with the same regiment in the original Expeditionary Force.

Each fought through the war; came out at the end with memories of more than four years of comradeship.

Peace, however, parted them. Not once in the last 20 years had they met, until—

At the outbreak of war three officers were called up again, and again the three were serving together.

Should Step Up Production

No matter what conditions obtain in the Canadian dairy industry at the moment, this is no time to consider anything but increased production. Following one of the worst seasons in recent years, New Zealand has produced 14 per cent. less butter this year than last.

Libraries In Homes Appear To Be Fast Dying Out

"Librarian" writes: I rather astonished a young architect the other day by asking him whether he ever planned for a library in modern houses. "Never," was his reply.

Modern houses, I fear, have no space for libraries as our fathers knew them. The urge to possess books of one's own is slowly but surely dying out. My architect friend went on to say that few of the houses built to-day could accommodate a library of any size.—Bel-fast News-Letter.

First Lord Of The Admiralty Considered Most Versatile Statesman In British History

Perhaps the most versatile statesman in British history, Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill finds himself at the opening of the present conflict in the same job he held at the start of the First Great War in 1914—First Lord of the Admiralty.

Twenty-five years later, a bit stout and round-shouldered, the 65-year-old journalist, author, soldier and politician returns to his historic office as a civilian head of the Empire's senior fighting service. He is one of two survivors of First Great War cabinets in the Chamberlain administration. The other is Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was Attorney-General in 1914 and Home Secretary, 1915-16.

Viscount Runciman, who as Lord President of the Council stepped out on Sept. 2, making way for younger men, was President of the Board of Trade in the Asquith administrations of the 1914-18 period.

It is written of Winston Churchill that he has "held more offices, served in more wars and practiced more arts than any other man in his time in the British Empire." The name of Winston Churchill is high-lighted in many of the crises of British history during the last half-century.

Just now London is recalling his contribution to Britain's strengthening in September, 1914. The First Great War was then in its eighth week. There was some talk that Germany, its army overrunning Belgium and France, but its navy driven in to home ports, would seek peace on fair terms to the allies. The aggressive Churchill would have none of that. "It is no time to talk peace," he thundered at recruiting meetings up and down England. "We are just beginning."

Churchill's own effort as First Lord of the Admiralty was a big factor in making impotent from the outset of the First Great War the German Kaiser's fleets. Appointed in 1911 with instructions to build up Britain's sea-power, he had a fine modern armada by 1914. Anticipating war, too, he kept this great fleet, reviewed by King George V. at Spithead July 20, 1914, on a war footing and intact. When war was declared Aug. 4 the British ships were at their appointed stations in the North Sea cutting off Germany's sea-power and blockading her merchant marine.

Churchill's next big projects, however, were failures. The Antwerp and Dardanelles schemes brought his downfall. Some commentators say both were strategically sound and had they been executed vigorously their originator would have emerged the great genius of the war.

But the Germans took Antwerp and the British failed to force the Dardanelles. Churchill resigned from the cabinet November 15, 1915, and crossed to France. For six months the former First Lord of the Admiralty was lieutenant-colonel commanding the Royal Scots Fusiliers on the Western Front.

Never wanting in personal courage, Colonel Churchill, one day when shells were falling about him, was advised by a superior officer to move to another dugout. Churchill pointed out there was no other location where he could maintain proper contact with his men.

"I tell you this is a very dangerous place," said the superior officer annoyed at the colonel's persistence. "Yes sir," said Churchill. "But after all this is a very dangerous war."

In 1917 Winston Churchill was recalled to the British cabinet. David Lloyd George made him minister of munitions and later secretary for war. In 1918-21 he was secretary for air.

Defeated in the general elections of 1922 Churchill was returned again to parliament in 1924 and became the chancellor of the exchequer in the second administration of Stanley Baldwin. He held that post for five years until the Conservative government was ousted by the Labor forces of Ramsay MacDonald. Churchill was a consistent foe of Socialism.

Born Nov. 30, 1874, oldest son of Lord Randolph Churchill and the former Jenny Jerome of New York, Winston Churchill in his youth lived in fear of being known merely as his father's son. The father was the third son of the seventh Duke of Marlborough and a one-time chancellor of the exchequer.

"You have done surprisingly well," said an old-timer to Winston in his earlier days, "but you owe it all to the fact you are Randy's son."

"Sir," replied the young man, "the time is coming when Lord Randolph will be chiefly remembered as the father of Winston Churchill."

The scion of the Marlboroughs warmed his hands at the fires of many an adventure from his teens on. Graduating from Sandhurst, he was commissioned in the Fourth Hussars. He wanted action at once and obtained leave to go to Cuba in 1895, fighting for Spain in its troubles with rebels.

In 1897 he served in the British campaign against the Mad Mullah on India's northwest frontier. Shortly afterwards he was mentioned in despatches and received the Malakand medal with two clasps.

Churchill was in the 1898 Anglo-Egyptian campaign which made its British leader "Kitchener of Khartoum." Churchill rode in the famous charge of the 21st Lancers at Omdurman.

He served in the Boer War (1899-1902) in a dual role of fighter and newspaper correspondent, having a commission in the South African Light Horse and an assignment for the London Daily Post. He was taken prisoner but escaped to take part in many of the major engagements of the campaign.

Churchill was an author from his youth up. With every period of war service in his earlier years he wrote a book—on occasion two or three books.

Since the first Great War his writings have included "The World Crisis", in four volumes, "My Early Life," and a monumental work on his great ancestor, "Marlborough". He has toured Canada and the United States in lecture series.

In 1908 he married Clementine Hozier, granddaughter of the Earl of Airlie. There were three daughters and one son.

Example Of Patriotism

Disabled Veterans Willing To Give Part Of Pensions To Aid In War

Unable to fight again, two disabled Canadian veterans of the first Great War have asked the government to withhold a portion of their monthly veterans' allowance until peace is restored, as their personal contribution to the successful prosecution of the present conflict.

This was revealed in letters to the war veterans' allowance board, where both cases have been brought to the attention of Hon. Ian Mackenzie, pensions minister.

The government will honor the offers by accepting them but both veterans have been assured that their full allowances will be restored on request. Names of the men were not disclosed.

W. S. Wood, chairman of the allowance board, commenting on the letters, said: "I should be disappointed if any publicity given these fine examples of patriotism resulted in other veterans who receive such allowances following their example as the allowance is small enough on which to live and rising prices leave little, if any, margin to spare."

"Nevertheless, Canadian people should know that the veterans who served in the last war have not ceased to care or ceased to give merely because many may be unfit for active service."

Relying On Canada

The Brockville Recorder and Times says the announcement that the Dominion government will take over for use as an air training centre the new provincial mental hospital at St. Thomas, where 1,100 patients are now accommodated, is one more indication of the reliance which Britain is placing upon Canada to keep her air arm strong.

Police of Bombay, India, have started a campaign against people stopping in the middle of the street to gossip.

There Are Restrictions

Japan's Religious Law Not What It Appears On Surface

The Japanese Diet has passed a Religions Law which is to be administered by a commission, and under this law, Christianity is for the first time given official recognition by the Japanese Government.

At first sight this seems a triumph for the many years of missionary efforts but there are restrictions which indicate that the authorities are not so generous. It is provided that every religion which is acknowledged as a national religion, shall have an official head who will be responsible for seeing that it lives up to Government regulations. Penalties of fines or imprisonment are provided for failing to do so. The purpose of this is that the followers of the Christian faith shall be subservient to Government uses, and must, as a unit, obey the political activities of the day. They have been given official status but they have also to carry out official obligations. Over and above that, the Shinto principle must still be obeyed; all Japanese must go to a Shinto shrine at stated periods and bow before the effigy of the Emperor. This decree caused trouble among Christian Koreans who found that their official religious status was being exploited as part of the machinery of the State.

The concession to Christians may turn out to be just another device of a totalitarian government. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Has Had Experience

Canada's Vice-Air Marshal Saw Active Service In Many Lands

Canada is led in war by top-ranking experts who have had long experience on land, sea and in the air. Most of them are Canadian-born. Some have seen active service in many lands.

Chief of the air staff is Vice-Marshal G. M. Croil. He was born in Milwaukee but came to Canada when 11 years old. Four years later he went with his parents to Scotland and when war broke out in 1914 he was running a tea and rubber plantation in Ceylon. When in Aberdeen he had belonged to the Territorials. At the outbreak of war he joined one of their units. He was commissioned captain in the Gordon Highlanders in 1915 and seconded to the Royal Flying Corps a few months later.

While on service in Salonika, Capt. Croil was made flight commander of a squadron. Then he was sent to Egypt where he became major in command of the 69th training wing. He occupied stations at Suez and El Rimal. When the armistice was signed he was leading a group of men in the Egyptian desert. One of his assignments was to fly T. E. Lawrence, "Lawrence of Arabia," on trips among the Arabian tribes.

Stress The Necessity Of Welfare Work During These Troublous Times

Loyalty Of India

Troop And Money Are At Disposal Of Allied Cause

Out of vast India has come heartening witness to the solidity of the Empire, states the Hamilton Spectator. No less than in the Great War have the people of that country buried political hatchets to give their support to a cause that they, in common with the Dominion, know has vital meaning.

Gurkhas, Sikhs and others of fighting races renowned as soldiers through history are moving to important outlying posts of the Empire. Their motto proven in the last conflict, they are confident of proving it again.

Again nearly every important Indian prince has placed troops and money at the disposal of the Allied cause. One of them, the Maharajah of Kapurthala, has offered the services of his two sons, both educated in England.

There was no hesitation on the part of the Aga Khan, head of millions of Moslems, in coming forward to urge his followers to give their utmost aid to Britain. He himself has offered to serve in whatever capacity he can.

In London hundreds of Indian students have volunteered for duties.

A correspondent recalls the example set by Mahatma Gandhi—who has left little doubt in the minds of the world as to where his sympathies are at this point—in the South African war. Forgetting his law and Indian grievances, he joined a British ambulance corps and served until the struggle was over.

An Unexpected Answer

Puzzle Over Purchase Of Land In New Mexico Solved

A Washington correspondent tells this story: For some time New Mexico has been speculating over the sudden purchase of 100,000 acres of land by John J. Raskob, director of General Motors and former head of the Democratic national committee.

Raskob, it was rumored, had struck oil. Other rumors had it that he had found gold. No one, however, had the temerity to ask him until Evie Robert (Mrs. Chip Robert) glamor girl of the Democratic national committee, visited Santa Fe this summer. Evie lost no time in popping the question.

"What are you going to do with all that 100,000 acres of New Mexican desert," she asked Raskob.

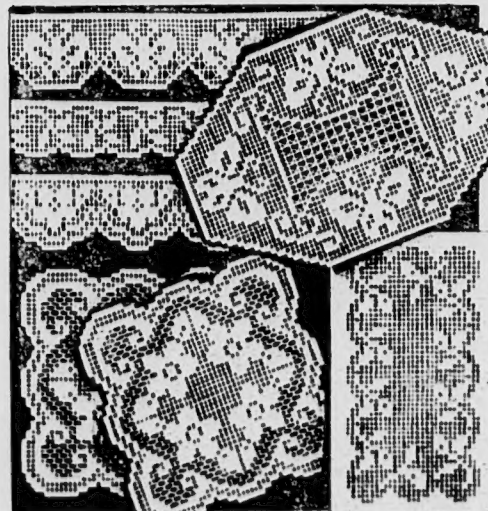

"I'm going to run cattle on it," was his meek reply.

A nation-wide appeal for funds for community welfare services, described as being made more essential than ever by war-time conditions, was broadcast over the network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Three addresses were given. That of Sir Lyman Duff, chief justice of Canada, was concluded with reading of a message from the governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir. Sir Lyman spoke from Ottawa.

Sir Joseph Chisholm, chief justice of Nova Scotia, spoke from Halifax, and from Vancouver, Hon. Aulay Morrison, chief justice of British Columbia. The program was arranged by the Canadian Welfare Council.

Lord Tweedsmuir wrote: "It will soon be my duty to appeal to the people of Canada to support the various benevolent activities called forth by the crisis. But now I would appeal to those civilian welfare services which must go on whether our country is at peace or war. Poverty and distress we have always with us, and their relief is a primary duty whatever other duties we may be forced to assume."

"Moreover, there will be much need of 'reconditioning' before certain classes of our people can meet that keying-up of production which war demands."

"Also, we must not, in the strain of a new war, forget the needs of the veterans of the last war. So I confidently appeal to the people of Canada to maintain those voluntary charities which are essential both to the success of our war effort and to our normal community life."

The din of arms must not silence "the still, small voice of personal benevolence which, in the heart of each one of us, solemnly and imperatively whispers 'I am my brother's keeper,'" said Sir Lyman Duff.

The war would make no lighter the load of affliction for the multitudes who suffer in normal times. The services to take care of them must be maintained and strengthened. With the dislocation of family life resulting from enlistments, new problems would arise with others.

The efficient welfare organizations that have grown up in Canada will be a bulwark in the present struggle, said Hon. Aulay Morrison.

"We are told that every human resource may be needed, and must be conserved," he said. "We may not feel early the real havoc of war. Civilian life will not change abruptly for the Canadian people. But the weight of responsibility upon each one of us will be immeasurably greater."

"Welfare work must be intensified in some directions to bolster up the weakened elements in our population. We have learned even in peace that it is costly to neglect our welfare responsibilities. We cannot afford to neglect them now."

Albino Hummingbird

Was Seen During August In Park At Clear Lake, Man.

Dick Sutton, technician at the Wasagamung Museum, Clear Lake, Man., reports that he saw an albino ruby-throated hummingbird in the park for ten days in August. The bird was pure white, with an iridescent sheen on the feathers. This is the only report we have received of albinism in hummingbirds and we have no recollection of a similar case in the bird literature. A herd of 23 buffalo, transferred from Alaska in 1928, has increased to 200, reports the Alaska Game Commission, and amongst them is an albino calf, white except for a brownish tinge on the top of the head. This is the third albino buffalo known to be living in North America at the present time. W. H. Thompson, 638 Sherbrook street, Winnipeg, reports seeing two partial albino house sparrows in late August, the birds being a dull white and evidently young as they were being fed by their parents. A few days later, two white sparrows and another with a white neck and body were seen in a flock of ten sparrows. —Winnipeg Free Press.

The young of the condor cannot fly for 12 months after being hatched.

Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women

The following news letter was prepared by the Convenor of Publicity, Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women:

"The Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women is taking place throughout the whole province of Alberta. Women everywhere realize that this registration is a survey of the qualifications of Canadian women rather than their enlistment for active work. It has been made clear by the V.R.C.W. that if a woman has registered and volunteered for a certain type of work, but finds that sometime later she is unable to qualify, then the registration is not binding. But women everywhere are seeing more clearly their individual responsibilities in bringing about conditions that will help to change the world to the sort of place in which we would like to live. Women who have homes and families to care for are not expected to neglect their nearest duties for work far afield. There is no more important work for women to do than that of caring lovingly and thoughtfully for their families and homes, but all women in the National Crisis are anxious to contribute their services to their country. The V.R.C.W. registration form will be an indication of what additional help a Canadian woman might be able to give if the occasion arose, and her circumstances have not changed in the meantime. By registering with the V.R.C.W. women will not be removed from the work they are already doing, unless they themselves would so desire.

When the forms are signed they will be card-indexed. Three copies will be made. One will go to the Government, another to the Nation-

The First Contingent

On Monday it was exactly forty years ago that the first Canadian volunteer contingent to fight for Great Britain in an Empire war sailed from Quebec for South Africa.

The S.S. "Sardinian" carried the Royal Canadian Regiment, under the command of Col. W. D. Otter, to Capetown. It was purely a volunteer force drawn from all sections of Canada and its members were all young and keen for adventure.

The voyage to Capetown lasted exactly a month and the Canadians were at once sent up-country, but it was not until February of the following year, 1900, that they received their baptism of fire in the battles of Paardeberg.

Issue Identification Documents to Aliens

Special identification documents will be issued to persons who, while technically classified as enemy aliens have clearly established their loyalty and trustworthiness in wartime.

The prime minister's office has announced that "It may be anticipated that the new identification documents will be issued to persons who, while technically enemy aliens by virtue of their German nationality, have clearly established their loyalty to Canada."

al Committee of the V.R.C.W., the third to the Province.

The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada have approved of this plan of V.R.C.W.

WOMEN! Canada needs your help. See that you register immediately at your nearest centre.

Local women may register with Miss Joyce Morgan at the Post Office or with Mrs. Ray Lantz, who have the necessary forms.

Province Provides Memorial Wreaths.

The Alberta Provincial Government, as in previous years, is again purchasing through the Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., sufficient wreaths made by the Veterans Shop, Department of Pensions and National Health in Alberta, to be placed upon all cenotaphs and memorials in the province.

The action of Premier Aberhart and his government in this connection is very much appreciated by the Canadian Legion and returned men and their dependents.

The wreaths all bear a ribbon from the Alberta government "In Remembrance," and show that the government does recognize the sacrifice made by those soldiers who enlisted in the last war and sacrificed their lives for Canada.

The making of the wreaths will assist disabled men and their dependents.

The Provincial government is assisting the carrying-out of the objects of the Fund, which are three fold:

- Firstly: Remembering those men who gave their all;
- Secondly: To help disabled men who are able to earn a little in the making of the wreaths;
- Thirdly: To create a fund in every locality in the province for the assistance of the men, and their dependents, who served and are now in need.

Million Dollars From Massey Estate To Be Used For Hospital In England

Under an order issued in Toronto by Mr. Justice W. T. Kelly $1,000,000 of the funds of the Massey Foundation are to be used for establishment of a military hospital in England.

There was no official entry of the order at Osgoode Hall, centre of the Ontario law courts, but it was learned that the order followed an application to the court for a ruling as to whether the conditions on which the Massey Foundation was established would permit such a contribution.

The Massey Foundation is a fund that was set up at the request of the late Chester D. Massey, father of Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London, from the estate of the late Hart Massey, founder of a big Canadian industry. The Massey Foundation has already contributed some $12,000,000 to charities.

Newspaper Advertising

Great Value Proved By U.S. Figures For Last Year

Six and one-half million dollars was spent by a tobacco manufacturer in U.S. newspapers in 1938. Next in order was another tobacco concern spending over $5,600,000. Two motor manufacturers were second and third, with total newspaper appropriations of $5,000,000 and $3,300,000. A soap manufacturer and another motor firm almost tied for fourth place with approximately two and three-quarter millions each. Grocery, automobile and tobacco classifications were leaders in expenditures, with totals of $30,349,239, $21,873,391 and $17,576,442, respectively. Over 622 national advertisers spent $25,000 or more in the newspapers, states the Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A.—Marketing.

The Mad Rush

The Tendency These Days Is To Expect Speed In Everything

Next to a newspaper office, perhaps the best news dispensing centre is the barber shop, and if you are not particular about the accuracy of the news, that's a good place to hear it. The barber shop is quite often a miniature House of Commons.

The other day while undergoing one of our infrequent haircuts we got to discussing things with the barber. Apart from a gentleman in the next chair, the shop was deserted. After a little while a prospective customer came in, and seeing both chairs occupied decided he couldn't wait and off he went.

And there was a sad look in the barber's eye. Before he opened his mouth we knew he was dreaming of the good old days when the menfolk liked to see the shop full of customers and an opportunity to discuss the affairs of the day. And then the barber began to talk.

"Well, I'll be dingbusted," he said. "See that chap. He couldn't even wait until I got through with you. Must be in an awful hurry. You know I remember the time when they would be tickled to death to wait around for an hour for a haircut or shave. They would get out the checker board or a deck of cards and have a swell time until one of us hollered 'next, please'."

And a sad look came into his eye as he said, "Gee, but things have changed. Some of them can't wait two minutes any more. I wonder what all this mad rush is about anyway?"

And when we left the barber chair we wondered the same thing. The tendency these days is to expect speed in everything. If a clerk in a store is not ready to serve us we walk into another store. We hate to wait for a seat at the show or a chair in the barber shop. And the funny thing about it is that nine out of ten of us who are in such a mad rush haven't anything else to do. Shakespeare has the phrase for it, "Much ado about nothing."—Fort Erie Times-Review.

Health LEAGUE of CANADA presents TOPICS of VITAL INTEREST by DR. J. W. S. McCULLOUGH

WHEN "AGE" MUST BE SERVED
Recent reports from the United States indicating that a more mature "national mind" is evolving in that country, owing to the change in age groups on the population, are interesting from the Canadian standpoint because of similar conditions here.

The statement made a few weeks ago by the Health League of Canada, that had the 1929 ratio of infant mortality prevailed in 1938, there would have been 6,545 more deaths than there were in Canada last year.

The Canadian average of 63 deaths of children under one year of age, per 1,000 live births, was a reduction from 92 in 1929. A later bulletin from the Health League gave the final figure for Ontario as only 49.5.

In both Canada and the United States the birth rate has been declining and medical men see no immediate prospect of an upturn.

While these two factors—a decreasing birthrate and decreasing infant mortality—would seem to offset one another, there are other factors reported by the American Medical Association that affect national life in both countries.

Due to new victories in the fight against disease and the possibility of reducing fatal accidents in the future, the proportion of people in upper age will increase. The medical association says:

"The control of the communicable diseases has been the most important factor in increasing average longevity; in fact, except for tuberculosis and pneumonia, all the other infections have been almost eliminated as factors of importance so far as the death rate is concerned."

McCord's eyes lit with approval. "Here you are and you've walked with a heavy pack to get here."

"No, I had to circle some lakes and swamp country, but I had little trouble making it. To-morrow we must drop downstream to help Noel up river with that canoe load."

McCord nodded. "You left them, you say, where they couldn't find their way back to the main stream without a guide, in weeks?"

Alan laughed. "That country's a network of lakes and muskeg. They're likely to get into Whale water and be on their way to Lake Bienville before they find out their mistake. They'll be lucky if they don't strike the freeze-up before they get out."

"Good boy! You did a good job on them, Alan. Now let's get back to Fort George. This Sergeant McQueen, as he calls himself, would be about five feet, ten. He's thick-set and rugged, carries his head a little forward and what you'd notice about his face, except a mean mouth, are his eyes—too close together and a faded blue."

Alan's jaw dropped in amazement. "Why! You—you must know him?"

McCord exhaled a cloud of tobacco smoke as his eyes wrinkled in an amused look. "I ought to know him," he said drily. "I had to look at that face for two years or more."

"And Slade—you know him, too?"

"Let's see, Sanford, well, you know him as Slade, would go a little over six feet, medium build, sandy hair and blue eyes. But the thing you'd notice about him are his hands and feet. They're too large and, somehow, you always notice them."

Alan nodded. "That's right! You do! That's Slade all right!"

"So much for these officers of the law," sneered McCord. "Now for this Hanbury woman who came in by sea-plane; you had a chance to look her over that night when she came to your place. Did you happen to notice a trick she had, when she laughed, of throwing her head back and looking at you through half-closed eyes? She's pretty handy with her eyes. Notice that, Alan?"

"You've met her?" Alan demanded, recalling only too clearly the hazel eyes of Mrs. Hanbury, half-masked by the long-lashed lids.

"Yes, I've seen her before—used to know her fairly well, in fact."

"I know, but how did you guess she was the woman I told you about, unless it was the name?"

"The name was strange. She's used several. It was her knowing this fellow, McQueen. Alan, those birds are not police!"

Cameron's jaw dropped as he stared at the other's grinning face.

"Not police?"

"No, and she's got nothing to do with the government!"

"But I don't understand! They had regular government papers signed in Quebec, identifying them and ordering all fur-posts to give them assistance. I made McQueen show me his badge. They must be—"

McCord threw back his head and blew a great cloud of smoke from his mouth. "Those papers were forged! These men are looking for me, all right, Alan, my lad, and she's their partner, but they're not police!"

"And you're not wanted by the government?"

McCord slowly shook his blond head. Then he asked: "Did this Mrs. Hanbury look like a murdered woman to you?"

"A murdered woman? What d'you mean?"

"You heard I was wanted for the murder of my wife?"

"Yes."

McCord gazed across the river up to the shoulders of the tundra above the forest as he said bitterly: "Mrs. Hanbury is—my wife."

"Your wi—Heather's mother?" A heavy load suddenly lifted from Alan's shoulders as he realized what this startling revelation of John McCord meant. John not an outlaw—a wanted man! He, Alan Cameron, a free man at Fort George. This McQueen—

"Yes—Heather's mother," repeated McCord, in a strained voice.

Inarticulate from the shock of his surprise, Alan allowed his pipe to slip through his fingers to the pebbles of the beach. The nightmare through which he had lived had proved, after all, only an ugly dream.

"It's wonderful, John, wonderful to know you're not a wanted man!" he cried. "I'm as dazed as a bear in a dead-fall! I can't believe it! It's too good to be true! McQueen—Slade, putting it over on Fort George that way! Oh, what a joke on them all! What a joke on Noel and me—racing them through the ice to reach Neil Campbell!"

Alan laughed until he was breathless. Then he suddenly sobered, as a look of such bitterness crept over McCord's desolate face that Alan quickly shifted his eyes to the river while his friend battled with the painful memories. For a long space they sat in silence while they smoked. Then McCord drew a deep breath and turned to his friend.

"Not knowing what I was—murderer, crook, hunted by the police, you stuck by me through gratitude, pity for Heather, and the fact that we had pledged each other our friendship," he said. "I knew what you were when I first looked into your pinched face, Alan. I knew you'd stand by. You have. Now I want you to hear my story."

And so, there, on the shore of the Talking, John McCord told Alan why he had come into the heart of Labrador, bringing a girl of seventeen on a strange quest.

The years preceding the World War had found him living in a small town in Ontario with a young wife and a little girl. Occupied as a timber superintendent for a pulp and lumber company, he had been compelled to spend much of his time away from home on various timber limits of his employers. Pleasure-loving, his wife chafed at his absences, at his limited means. Rumors reached him or her actions in his absence, but he brushed them aside. By the time the war broke out she had left him and Heather. She loved life in the cities and went and found it. Leaving the child with his mother, he enlisted and went over seas.

For two years he served in the same battalion with a man who had been a prospector and had talked much of his wanderings from the Yukon to Labrador.

After Messines Ridge, where he got the ugly gash on his forehead, McCord found himself in the same hospital with his friend, Aleck Drummond. In Montreal, before the war, Drummond had met a Hudson's Bay man who had once been stationed at Fort Chimo, at the mouth of the great Koksoak River which rises somewhere in the heart of Labrador and flows north into Ungava Bay.

"I see, now, why you asked me to talk to Dessane about the Koksoak and the River of Skulls," interrupted Alan.

"Wait a minute and you'll understand," replied McCord, continuing his narrative.

The fur man had been told by some wild Naskapi, who once came to the post, of a branch of the Koksoak called the River of Skulls, because of a battle between Koksoak Eskimos and Naskapi, in which they had wiped each other completely out. Later, the Indians found the bodies; they were afraid to bury them because of the moaning of the spirits of the dead in the gorge above. So the skulls and bones lay strewn along the shore and flats. After this the Indians called it the River of Skulls, and the gorge, The Gorge of the Spirits, Manitou Gorge.

"That's exactly the same story Dessane told me!" observed Alan.

"Yes, but listen to this," returned McCord, and went on with his tale.

One year some Naskapi, more daring than the rest, were camped on the sand flats that reach a long way below this gorge, spearing caribou, for the deer were crossing here and the Indians overcame their fear of the spirits to get the deer. They had built a fire against the roots, full of clay and gravel, of a spruce that had come downstream and grounded on the shore. The heat of the fire softened the blue clay stuck to the roots and one of the Indians noticed some small stones, as he thought, in the clay. He was fooling with them when he realized that the small particles were much too heavy for stones. He scraped off the clay, and pounding them found them malleable and dull yellow in color. These he brought to Chimo and showed to the Hudson's Bay people. They were nuggets of pure gold. But none of the company men could get away to hunt gold in the interior. It was a long chance, anyway. This story the Hudson's Bay man told to Drummond.

The following year the supply ship of the company brought Aleck Drummond to Fort Chimo. There they warned him he would never reach the mythical River of Skulls and, if he did, he would starve because he couldn't hunt for gold and caribou at the same time. And he'd have to find the deer, or starve. But Aleck had reached the River of Skulls and he had found gold, and had not starved.

"You mean to tell me that he poled and tracked hundreds of miles into the interior, found gold and got out to Chimo before the ice?" demanded the doubtful Alan, thrilled with anticipation of what was coming.

"I do. If you'd known Aleck you'd realize that he was one of the few men who could have done it."

British Censorship

Rules Laid Down Are Now Somewhat Less Exacting

The British press censorship, which caused widespread dissatisfaction among newspapermen at the start of the war, has improved to such an extent that complaints are now rare.

In the early days, before the censors were shaken down in their new jobs, long delays were common and correspondents never knew whether their copy had been passed, rejected or butchered.

Now the censors telephone politely if there is even a delay in passing the copy.

Copy filed by The Canadian Press goes through censorship in cable company offices, but the censors there must submit doubtful copy to their head office at the ministry of information.

Recently a correspondent wrote a story after visiting the R.A.F. training school. The story contained a few figures which the censor felt might help the enemy. He telephoned that he was deleting one paragraph, but listened to an argument that the figures were incomplete and that no calculations could be based on them. Finally he deleted only three words.

The Right Spirit

Film Star Returns To England To Offer Her Services

Anna Neagle, English film star who has been seen in several notable pictures in this country, recently completed an engagement in Hollywood. She will return at once to England to offer her services to the British Government.

"I could never stay here comfortably, making an enormous salary, while England is in this mess," Miss Neagle said the other day. "If there is nothing else for me to do, they might need me to entertain behind the lines."

That is the spirit that is animating the British people everywhere to-day. Calgary Herald.

Predicts Record-breaking Tourist Season When Big Bend Road Opens

Mr. Everard Clarke, president of the Vernon (B.C.) Board of Trade, who with Mrs. Clarke has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Clarke, predicts a record breaking year for the Canadian motor tourist trade when the gate of the new Big Bend highway is opened next Friday.

Recently completed, the Big Bend road which follows the major bend of the Columbia river in the Okanagan Valley, is the binding link in the ocean-to-ocean Canadian highway, and Canadians and Americans faced with the many objections to European travel at present, and the devaluation of the Canadian dollar, are expected to bring about a tourist trade in the Dominion far in excess of last year's $268,000,000, stated Mr. Clarke.

The padlocked gate is at the commencement of the Revelstoke-to-Golden stretch of the Big Bend road and should be open in the spring of next year to a flood of motor traffic, he said.

Beauties of the Okanagan Valley, the Fraser Canyon and the Columbia river, second largest river on the North American continent, will become a new field of exploration and adventure for travellers during the coming year, he maintained.
